Italian-American Catholics in the Diocese of Newark - A Brief History

* Each of the following passages outlined below were extracted from the following book: Bishops of Newark, 1853-1978 (South Orange, 1978).

“The 1870’s saw a six-fold increase in the number of Italians, and Bishop Corrigan took measures to provide for their spiritual care. The first church in the Diocese of Newark, intended mainly for the Italian-born, was St. Paul of the Cross in North Vineland, which was blessed by the Bishop in June 1880. It was, of course, among the immigrant laborers that the strength of the Catholic Church in New Jersey was still to be found, and the appearance of these Italians indicated the beginning of the new immigration, which would be of great importance in the future.” (Bishops of Newark, 44-45)

“Immigration during the last decade of the 19th century was highlighted by the Italians, who became the most numerous group to arrive on our shores. Reflecting the national pattern, the sons of Italy were the first group of the new immigrants to settle in large numbers in the Diocese of Newark, and they seem to have been mainly from southern Italy. By 1900 there were 32,487 Italian-born living in the Diocese, and they had nine district Italian parishes. The census of 1880 showed only 1,547 Italian-born in the entire State. Many were nominal Catholics when judged by American standards.” (Bishops of Newark, 59)

“There were two characteristics of Italian immigration that may have accentuated the difficulty. Many Italians came as unskilled migrant laborers with no intention of settling permanently, and as transients, they recognized no personal stake in either the Church or the State. Secondly, they were primarily males, and many Latin men have been poor church-goers. In Italy, moreover, the Church was long established and did not depend on the regular offerings of all the faithful, and the experience in the Diocese of Newark shows that it took time for them to become accustomed to the idea of regular support of the Church according to their means. Some of this can be explained by the fact that Italians often met with prejudice from their co-religionists as well as from others. In the City of Newark, at least, it was said that the Italians “suffered more perhaps than any other [immigrants] as a result of social rejection by established residents;” and there was still “a large residue of anti-Catholic feeling in the city when they began settling in large numbers during the 1880’s.” (Bishops of Newark, 59)

“In the over-all picture there was a great shortage of priests to care for the Italian immigrants who were, according to one writer, “the first Catholic people who arrived here in such great numbers unaccompanied by their own spiritual guides.” Much of the work among the Italians in Newark was begun by priests who were not of that nationality. Conrad M. Schotthoefer, for example, founded the first three Italian parishes in the see city, namely St. Philip Neri’s, Our Lady of Mount Carmel, and St. Lucy’s. The first Italian church in the Diocese, Holy Rosary, Jersey City, was built by the neighboring pastor of St. Bridget’s, James Hanly, in 1886.” (Bishops of Newark, 59)
“The Holy See was aware of some of the problems concerning the Italians in the United States and was solicitous for their spiritual welfare. The first apostolic delegate also showed a keen interest in the welfare of the Italians in the Diocese of Newark. Wigger assured Satolli that he had done all that he could for the Italians in the way of establishing parishes and helping them financially. Moreover, Wigger’s fluency in Italian made it possible for him to get close to the people by hearing confessions and preaching in their mother tongue on the occasion of dedications and Confirmation. Nevertheless, as the one mainly responsible for the souls in the Diocese, Bishop Wigger could not close his eyes to the indifferent church-going habits of so many of this part of his flock.” (Bishops of Newark, 59-60)

“Another sore point in regard to the Italians was their poor support of the Church, and this too could be attributed to their experience in Italy, the Church, and this too could be attributed to their experience in Italy, where the Church did not depend on the regular donations of the faithful to maintain itself. Newark’s first Italian mission at St. John’s had to close in 1883, because of lack of financial support; the collections averaged only 80 cents a week, although some 300 out of the 1,400 Italians of the city attended Mass there. Moreover, it was only Bishop Wigger’s generosity that saved the Italian churches in Newark. It must be remembered, however, that these people usually had the lowest paying jobs and lived frugally, often in order to return to Italy or to bring over their families. Sometimes the financial embarrassment was aggravated by imprudent management by pastors who also were not used to American ways. Yet, in spite of the early difficulties, these parishes survived and ultimately prospered. The financial problems often led to jurisdictional disputes because some of the pastors sought to obtain support from the English-speaking people.” (Bishops of Newark, 60)

“Bishop Wigger was anxious that the Italian children should receive a parochial school education because he hoped that in this way they might become better informed Catholics than their parents had been. Under the circumstances, of course, it was difficult to add the burden of a school to the struggling parishes. By 1900, however, three Italian parishes, St. Philip Neri’s and Mount Carmel in Newark, St. Michael’s in Orange, and the French and Italian parish of Our Lady of Victories in Paterson, had schools. Wigger was insistent that the Italians under his jurisdiction become well informed about their religion in order to be able to defend it against the Protestants and infidels whom they might encounter.” (Bishops of Newark, 60-61)

“One reason why Bishop Wigger was so insistent that these people become properly instructed was the common practice among them to contract civil marriage, as was demanded by law in Italy. An even more compelling reason to insist on the need for religious training was the danger of Protestant efforts to win over these new arrivals and their children. To their credit it must be said that few Italians actually gave up their faith. Of all the nationalities under his jurisdiction, the Italians caused Bishop Wigger the greatest worry. [Things, however, have long since changed for the better. Most of the prejudice that contributed to, and developed from, the former conditions has vanished, and the Italian Catholics have assumed their position as faithful and generous members of the Church of Newark. A good indication of this can be gathered from the number of religious vocations that have been fostered among them.]” (Bishops of Newark, 61)

“The Chancery Office requires parish priests to submit yearly reports reflecting the financial and spiritual condition of their churches. In the early years of the Archdiocese, pastors composed highly personalized reports, frequently presenting them as narratives. By the late nineteenth century, however, the Chancery Office distributed standardized forms to all pastors. Information contained in these reports includes: No. of Catholics in Parish; No. making Easter Duty; No. of children attending parochial school; No. of Confraternities in the parish and No. of members in each; No. of baptisms, marriages, confirmations, communions and burials performed; descriptions of any additions of church property; itemized lists of receipts and expenditures; a listing of debts; and other comment and suggestions from pastors.” (+ Individual records are listed under the corresponding parish headings below.)

Archdiocese of Newark Parish history questionnaire, 1952, ADN 0010.004
“In 1952, Archdiocesan Historian, Msgr. Joseph Brady, began collecting material for a proposed history of the Catholic Church in New Jersey. In conjunction with this undertaking, Brady distributed Parish History Questionnaires to parishes throughout the State. Though Msgr. Brady’s death prevented the project’s completion, seventy-four parishes did respond. Many simply rehashed information contained in dated secondary sources (such as Joseph Flynn’s The Catholic Church in New Jersey), while others provided scanty or incomplete data. Some replies, however, included extensive information and painted valuable historical portraits. The questionnaire has been reproduced…” (+ Individual records are listed under the corresponding parish headings below.)

Content: This book follows world affairs concerning the Catholic Church, especially in Italy with Mussolini and the Pope. It also documents Walsh’s work with the Italian community and the Fillipini sisters including the estate that was purchased for them in Morristown, New Jersey. Pages: 93. 5 files. Partial index. Condition: Despite a few warped pages, the overall contents are in tact.”
Scrapbooks. Book 22: Title: “Newark- 1929” Years, 1929. [Abstract] “Type: Newspaper articles. Content: In 1929, Bishop Walsh sponsored an eight year old Italian piano prodigy, Glauco D’Attili, to share his gift with the United States. There is a lot of information on the young boy’s trip…There are also numerous articles about the opening of new convents and schools in the diocese. Another highlight of this book is the involvement of the Bishop in the Italian groups of New Jersey. Pages: 168. Blank index. 8 files, 2 boxes. Condition: Pages are a bit warped, but in decent shape.”

Also there are membership cards for the same church and letters requesting from the bishop the right to belong and participate in the church because some people were being assigned to new parishes because of new zoning lines.” Parish Information - List of Members in Our Lady of Liberia in West New York, N.J., (1948-1951), There is a short list of new members in the church. Also there are membership cards for the same church and letters requesting from the bishop the right to belong and participate in the church because some people were being assigned to new parishes because of new zoning lines. Parish Information - Petitions from Madonna della Libera (Our Lady of Liberia), (1948-1951), Enclosed are letters to the bishop requesting that an Italian priest (Msgr. Bongetti) be sent to Our Lady of Liberia because the church members are primarily Italian and they were assigned an Irish pastor! (Rev. Mansfield) Petitions were sent both before and after Rev. Mansfield arrived at the church. Also enclosed are letters from Mansfield explaining to the bishop the situation.
