Permission to Use Materials

The Monsignor William Noé Field Archives & Special Collections Center, Seton Hall University offers our resources for educational purposes. We do not require that users request permission from our Center to quote from or reproduce material for personal or classroom use; however, users are requested to provide proper citation for published work(s). This will provide proper credit to the Center and also aid other researchers through information in our reference files. In addition, no fees are charged in these cases.

The Monsignor William Noé Field Archives & Special Collections Center, Seton Hall University requires that researchers obtain permission to reproduce any materials or collection content for publication. Any materials reproduced in publication must be properly cited. A one-time use fee of $45.00 applies to materials reproduced for publication, charged by the Center as physical custodian and owner of the materials.

Citing proper sources is the responsibility of the researcher. It is the obligation of the author to be familiar with any copyright restrictions on materials used from our Center for inclusion in their particular work. It is also the duty of the author to understand how copyright impacts their work and obtain all necessary permissions prior to publication. The Monsignor William Noé Field Archives & Special Collections Center, Seton Hall University does not assume responsibility for any infringements on copyright or invasion of privacy.
